Performance Recap & Insights

September was a breakout month for reach. Total views grew 299% from August, from about 1,275 to 5,089 views across 21 posts. The growth came from new people, not just our existing audience. Non-followers made up 46.5% of all views and 48.4% of all interactions, which means people who do not follow us yet engaged with our content more actively than our own followers did. Engagement was strong at 3.8% of total reach, and 146 accounts visited the profile after seeing a post. The next step is converting that attention into action, as only 11 of those 146 visits turned into a new follower and 11 into a link tap. The content is clearly reaching the right people, so the focus for next month is making the profile and the call to action work as hard as the content already does.

One thing we would like to align on with you. The villa is currently on a long term booking until the start of November, so we see two options. Firstly, we can keep the marketing running through October to maintain momentum and keep the account growing, so the audience is already warm when the villa opens again. Or we can pause and restart the push toward the end of October, closer to the opening calendar again, which would save on marketing spend for a month where we cannot convert bookings anyway. Both are reasonable, it depends on whether you would rather protect the momentum or protect the budget. Our suggestion is to stay light but visible through the end of October with a lower posting volume, then go full push from the end of the month into November so the villa opens to an audience that is already paying attention.

Please let us know which direction you prefer and we will plan around it.

Omah Sing Nduwé Rasa.

A home that has feeling. Warmth, affection, empathy. Not a building that simply exists, but a house where there is peace, and where the people inside genuinely care for each other.

Dua Hati means two hearts.

The motif comes from the traditional textiles of Saparua, Maluku. And the four petals represent our family.
One family, two origins, in one place.
